

Wallace
in the Muslim World
:
Translating
"The Malay Archipelago"
from the Middle East to Southeast Asia.

Wallace in the Muslim World: Translating "The Malay Archipelago" from the Middle East to Southeast Asia

Supported by Cross-sectoral Research Platform Development Program, Kyoto University

2023.11.6<sup>MON</sup> 10:00-15:30

Mid-sized Meeting Room, 3rd Floor,
Inamori Foundation Memorial Building, Kyoto University

Format In-person only

Audience Open to the public, students and researchers

This international workshop addresses the reception of "science" in general and "natural sciences" in particular from the Middle East to Southeast Asia. The works of the 19th-century naturalists including Alfred Russel Wallace (d. 1913), especially his "The Malay Archipelago", will be discussed. We will review the relevant literature through examining lesser-known aspects of natural sciences in the Muslim world. Please join us to discuss (a) the story of Wallace; (b) the European presentation of "Nature" and "Human" in the Malay-Indonesian world; and (c) their reception among other Muslim communities.

MAIN CONTRIBUTORS

Peter Riddell, Professorial Research Associate, SOAS University of London
Edwin Wieringa, Professor, University of Cologne, Germany
Michael Feener, Professor, CSEAS, Kyoto University
Tony Day, Independent Researcher, Austria
Ryota Sakamoto, Associate Professor, CSEAS, Kyoto University
Majid Daneshgar, Associate Professor, CSEAS, Kyoto University

ORGANIZER

CSEASWEB_ACCESS